This celebration funded by Heifer was started by a lecture of sanitation and health for women given by officials from Longyang Sub-bureau of the Administration Bureau of Gaoligong Natural Reserve. Over 60 women in Nankang Village participated in the lecture focusing on the women’s daily health and elementary knowledge for health care, and this delighted the women very much. Besides, the women also learnt tips for self-check and for preventing diseases. The one-hour lecture was followed by a quiz of environment protection, Gaoligong Natural Reserve, Heifer projects and rural livestock breeding techniques. Those women were active in answering the questions; apart from the gifts they got from the activity, what they got more was the happiness of participating. After the quiz session, 12 performances were performed by women’s in the village, which impressed the organizers deeply for their amazing enthusiasm, the older ladies singing the traditional folk songs, the youngsters singing pop songs and performing the traditional dance. They also displayed the dance they directed, in which the daily farming activities like sowing, harvesting were added. Although there was no musical accompaniment for them and they were all amateurs, they were really trying their best to perform, which helped to win rounds of applause for themselves. Then a tug-of-war contest was held after the art show. The women were divided into 3 groups according to the villages they from and 6 women representatives were selected to participate in the contest. In the end women from Waizhai Village got the first place with joy and cheer. The activity was closed by a song for the protection of gibbon-We are Friends singing by the women participants in the celebration and the organizers.
